Be Fire Ready: visit the CFA website and refer to the Corangamite Shire Website information below

Know your risk and create a plan
When fires do occur, they present a major risk and threat to life and property within the Corangamite Shire. Information on understanding fire risk in your environment can be found at the CFA website -

Am I at risk?
It is important to prepare and practice your own home emergency plans, have a go-bag ready, and know where you will get reliable information during the event of a fire. Plan what choices you will make if a fire breaks out near your home. Know your triggers when to leave, where you will go and how to safely get there. Your plans should include your pets, horses and other livestock. Being prepared is a critical step in being ready. The CFA have many helpful publications to help you prepare, including the Fire Ready Kit. See links to the CFA website below.

The VicEmergency website has a wealth of resources to help you understand your fire risk and know what to do before and during a fire. The VicEmergency App includes warning and incident notifications for fire, flood, storm, earthquake, tsunami, weather warnings, shark sightings, beach closures and more. The app can be downloaded for free on both apple and android phones.

The Lismore Presbyterian Church

The quest in Lismore to keep our little bluestone Presbyterian church open for the community has been now going on for nearly a year. But now we are told, despite our work, that it is likely that the church (Lismore's oldest intact building) will soon be sold. There are many real concerns about this for our community. One is that the church connects the community back to its earliest days of settlement, being built in a time when things had settled down after the gold rush, when sheep breeding and communications were starting to make real advances, but when water supplies, transport and the local dingos were still a problem, and when all agricultural work required the muscle of horses, bullocks or people (including children).

This church was built in 1864. This was when there were almost no people in the town (maybe ten families) and not that many more on the five big stations that surrounded the town. Up until then the Presbyterians were reliant on a minister based at Kilnoorat, a bit south of Darlington. This minister would head off each week in different directions to provide a service at stations and towns within about an 80 km radius - when there were no good roads or bridges, and using a horse and buggy.

The meeting of these people at Lismore in early March 1864, mostly recent immigrants from lowland Scotland, voted to build their own church. By the end of March 1864 the money was raised or promised, an architect selected (though he was a millwright with basic engineering skills and not a properly trained architect) and a builder appointed. This builder, Mr Botterill, came from Skipton, and brought a team of men who were obviously competent at both quarrying the bluestone from a quarry in the southeast of Lismore, and at building. By July the foundations were in place and the foundation stone had been laid. And by late October the church was finished and the first service was held in this new church, with the roof on, the floor laid, the pews in place, and windows and some form of lighting in place.

JL Currie at Larra was one of the local station owners who all strongly supported the Lismore Presbyterian church. Another was Joseph Mack, who initially had built Mack's Hotel in Geelong, but came to manage Berrybank in 1851 for his brothers-in-law, J and T Austin of Barwon Park. Joseph Mack donated money to help build the manse and his daughter Mary donated 300 pounds to build the Jubilee Hall in 1923. This hall served as the Sunday School, plus as the meeting room for church business, for the Presbyterian Women's Association, for a place for managing disaster relief, a place for annual flower shows, and was the place for people attending funerals to go to afterwards, for a cup of tea, sandwiches and cake, and a catch-up.

Joseph Mack kept a detailed diary and his son (also Joseph) kept this practice up, noting one day that as his father was harnessing his horse to go to a meeting of the Lismore church board the horse kicked him and broke his leg. A month later a diary entry notes the day his father died of gangrene.

Others important in the raising of money for building the church and in its later management were John Logan of Mt Elephant, John Wilson of Gala, and Adam Robertson of Gnarpurt. The many early townspeople supporting the church included George Skene the blacksmith, Charles Taylor a builder, and William Drinnan.

There are a few examples of similarly old historic churches in Victoria that somehow are being retained by their communities and used for both formal services, and a variety of cultural and educational activities. These include the churches at Yandoit (near Castlemaine), St Brigid's near Koroit, Carapooee near St Arnaud, and the Carngham church near Ballarat. The group Friends of Lismore Presbyterian Church, that formed to try to prevent the church from being sold but instead to be a community building being used for all sorts of positive activities, is now working on their Plan B, and is keen to hear of the various options or pathways that other communities have explored that can be adapted for making our old Lismore church a place for good community activity.

With an app now available for every type of event, it has never been easier for regular people to help scientists lean more about our natural world.

Citizen science events help research by allowing everyday people to collect large amounts of data across wide areas and long timeframes that professional scientists could never achieve alone. It helps raise public awareness of various environmental issues, and by using unpaid volunteers is leaves researchers available to tackle the big issues with less funding.

The following events are available through phone apps

- Aussie Bird Count (October 19 – 25th 2026) – entries help track changes in native bird populations
- FrogID - October is a peak breeding season, making it the perfect time to help scientists map frog distributions by recording frog calls
- iNaturalist - helps you identify the plants and animals around you while recorded your sightings
- Australia Pollinator Week (November 7 – 15th 2026) – help scientists better understand the plight of Australia's inset pollinators
- PlaytpusSPOT – record and map sightings of wild platypus in local rivers and lakes
- EchidnaCSI – snap a photo of a wild echidna and upload it through the app

Native Vegetation around Lismore Derrinallum and Skipton

It is in flower at Murnong Indigenous Garden, on conserved roadsides such as Chatsworth Road, in some native grassland paddocks and in nature reserves likethe Skipton Common and Cressy Racing track.

This week you may see billy buttons, creamy candles, cut leaf burr daisies, common everlasting, sun orchids and flax lilies. The golden moth orchids seem to have finished flowering but you may be lucky enough to smell the chocolate lilies, vanilla lilies or even sweet hounds tongue.

Yet to come are the blue devils and beauty heads

Congratulations and well done to the local women who completed their chain saw training course last week.

This was run by the Shire as part of the fire recovery program which looks to build skills for the future
Thank you Shire, trainer Andrew, and all who gave support, including from the sidelines
